UWM Electa Quinney Institute for American Indian Education/Story MKE - University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee (Vendor) Story MKE designs robust discussions of contemporary fiction and poetry by QTBIPOC writers for Milwaukee Public Schools students. Interested readers come together with teacher mentors and university facilitators to discuss their selected books, read together, and study how writers build stories. Students learn to lead discussions and connect ideas to their personal stories or issues of interest to their communities. Book chats culminate in a meeting with the living writer as well as student-designed cultural literacy activities to amplify these stories and their own voices. Together, we build personal libraries, lifelong readers, and leadership skills.

The activities at Upham Woods are designed to encourage youth leaders to address environmental issues with the goal being the development of caring and responsible stewards of the natural world and its inhabitants. Through Upham Woods' educational programming, youth obtain a unique view on how Wisconsin has changed ecologically and culturally. Youth are encouraged to explore Wisconsin's past to discover valuable lessons that will enable each of us to better plan for the future of Wisconsin and the world. Through a combination of Upham Woods staff and group leaders, environmental and outdoor education lessons are presented through experiential, hands-on activities. Programming rotations will include service learning, Interpretive geology and history hikes on Blackhawk Island and North Shore, Water ecology exploration, Team building challenge course and group initiatives, The Conservation Challenge, Canoeing and kayaking, Campfires, and other relevant STEM focused activities. the cost is for food and lodging
